

The Judging Dreams

by Vanessa Agahi

One day there was a girl called Rosalina, who had a brother called Zach. Rosalina has long brown hair, brown eyes and is kind and caring. Zach has short brown hair and blue eyes, and is annoying.

Rosalina became a judge on Australia's Got Talent. She was very nervous when she got there. The first act was a few girls dancing but they kept on falling over and bumping into each other and tripping on their shoe laces. The second act was of someone juggling clubs but they kept on dropping them and one of them accidentally landed in the audience. Rosalina couldn't believe what she saw.

The third act was of a girl singing but she was singing out of tune and missed where she was meant to come in. She also forgot the words to the song. The fourth act was someone playing the piano, but they were starting and stopping because they couldn't read the music and played an accidental when it was meant to be a sharp or a flat. The fifth act was two people skipping on a long skipping rope but they kept tangling themselves up and whacking each other in the head with the skipping rope. The sixth act was of someone hula hooping, but the hula hoops kept on stopping spinning and flying off stage.

After that it was judging time and Rosalina didn't know what to do because everyone was horrible. "Why was everyone so awful at what they were doing?" she was thinking. All of the other judges said what they wanted to say but not her. She was the last person to say something. She couldn't think of anything. She felt like running away or hiding under her table, when she woke up. She didn't realise it was a dream. Her brother was whispering to her to have a bad dream. As soon as her annoying brother Zach saw that she had opened her eyes he jumped back into his bed and pretended that he didn't do anything.

After that, Rosalina dreamt the same dream so she woke up because she didn't want to go through that experience again. She had another dream about it but this time it was different so she let it happen. The first act was a few girls dancing. They danced very beautifully and didn't fall over at all. The second act was someone juggling. The juggler kept on adding in more clubs to juggle and ended up with twenty clubs and he didn't even drop one. The third act was of someone singing. The singer had a very strong voice and didn't sing out of tune. The fourth act was of someone playing the piano. The pianist played the song very smoothly and played all of the sharps and flats. The fifth act was of two girls skipping on the same long skipping rope. They skipped to the music beat and didn't tangle themselves up. The sixth act was of a boy hula hooping. He had two hula hoops on both of his arms, four around his waist, three around his ankles and one around his neck, and none of the hula hoops stopped spinning. After all of the acts Rosalina had her mouth wide open. She was so amazed she didn't know what to say. When it came to judging time she knew she had a nice comment about all of them. But she didn't know who to eliminate.

Just when she thought it was going to be like the last dream the host came on stage and said that there was one more person who forgot to go on. The last act was of someone tightrope walking, and the tightrope was really low so it wasn't that interesting, and the tightrope was so wide that it looked like a plank of wood, so now she knew who she wanted to eliminate. She eliminated the tightrope walker. She woke up again and this time when she woke up she saw her mum whispering have a lovely dream. Then her mum gave her a hug and said "You'd better get some sleep now, you've got a big day tomorrow. You don't want to be late for auditioning for Australia's Got Talent." Then Rosalina realised that her dream was because she was so excited and nervous for auditioning on Australia's Got Talent the next day.

After all of that Rosalina went to sleep and had the best dream ever about winning Australia's Got Talent.
