

The Treasure Hunt

Captain John Demon was sailing the Pacific Sea with his trusted pirate mate, 'Pirate Mike Melbourne'.

"Look out Mike, Captain Cruise's Ship is coming," warned Captain Demon. "We don't want to bump into him. His ship is right nearby and we're heading to the same place."

"Yes Captain. I can see him," replied Mike Melbourne.

They could see the giant ship cruising towards them and knew an adventure was ahead.

"Well hello Captain Demon, Me and my matey are going on a treasure hunt.

Care to join us?" Asked Captain Cruise.

"We would love to come," answered Captain Demon.

Captain Cruise told his pirate mate to go to the lost ship. He jumped to the wheel of his ship, and they all sailed off on their two ships.

When they got to the lost ship, it was submerged down on the ocean floor. They held their breath and jumped into the water.

They swam down until they got to the bottom. Luckily there were air pockets in the ship they could catch a breath from. Captain Demon saw Captain Cruise go into the ship too and start searching. Captain Demon followed.

In the ship, Captain Demon found a treasure box in a room. He opened it and found it was not treasure. It was old fish bones. Cruise saw Captain Demon shutting the box and snatched it off him.

Captain Demon waved his arms madly as if to say, “no, don’t take that.” But Captain Cruise just smirked and swam away with the chest.

Now Captain Demon was alone in the ship, and nearly out of breath. He found an air pocket and took another breath. He found a barrel of soggy clothes and started rummaging through. Then he felt something hard and picked it up and found it was a key. He took it to a door and unlocked it. He opened the door and entered another room. He looked through some more barrels but there was nothing in them. He had nearly given up until he saw a little chest in the corner of the room. He looked at it for a bit and then realised it was not locked. He opened it and found it was full of TREASURE.

Captain Demon swam back up to the ship and Mike was waiting for him. Captain Cruise had already sailed off.

“Cruise opened up that chest once he was on his ship, and all that was in it was fish bones!” Mike laughed.

“I tried to warn him, but he snatched it off me and swam away,” Captain Demon replied, as he lifted his small chest onto his ship.

“What do you have there? More fish bones?” Mike Melbourne asked.

Captain Demon opened the chest, and showed him.

“Nope, it’s real treasure this time.”

The pirates discussed whether to give Captain Cruise his share of the loot. “Probably not, he was too selfish and left too early,” Captain Demon decided.

The pirates sailed off, deciding what to do with their treasure.
